THE STORY OF VINOL SEN. HOAR'S

By Rickert & Wells, Druggists.

Our experience with medicines extends over many years. We've had ample op-portunity to watch thousands of them and their results. We've never seen any medicine sell itself as does Vinol, Customer after customer comes for Vinol again and again. That's the best kind of a testimonial. They wouldn't want a second bottle if the first gave them no

How the Author Made His First Strike on a Murder Case.

The late Lafendlo Hearn, the well known author, was "a slip of a man," dark and not unlike the Japanese, whom he chose for his own and among whom his life went out, says the New York World. Ills genius was never questioned from the night in Cincinnati when by chance he happened to have thrown at him in the Cincinnati Enquirer office the assignment to do the Rufus-Schilling tragedy. Hearn had drifted into the office and was considered little better than a tramp, and he got the assignment because the rest of the staff was busy.

the Cincinnati gas works. The murderer had hacked his victim to pieces and immediately afterward, and the half cooked remains were recovered. Mr. Hearn, who first visited the scene, seemed to steep himself in the awful horror. He felt of the crisp and blackened flesh, he smelled its sickening odor, he took the unrecognizable head is and ran his hogers into tendance of repre ted with blood and brains, stuck to his hands. Asking a half dozen questions of the horrified bystanders, he bounded away and disappeared as suddenly as Hearn's story took up three pages of the Enquirer the next morning, and it. has been said that if ever there was a classic printed in a newspaper it was Hearn's story of the revolting murder.

Hearn went from Cincinnati to New Orleans, and there he developed in his dreamy sort of way. He was a good writer, but had absolutely no regard for facts. Before he left Cincinnati be got a steeple jack to carry him to a dizzy beight on his shoulders. When he came down from the spire of the cathedral he wrote of the city as he and beheld it. It was a gem of descriptive writing.

Genius breathed in every line of it, but the joke was that Hearn was so nearsighted that he couldn't see a thing five feet away from him.
